ZK/U

The ZK/U – Center for Art and Urbanistics was founded in 2012 in the Moabit city garden in a former freight yard as a cultural venue initiated by artists with an artistic residency program, project and neighborhood spaces. It serves as a hub for exchange between global discourses and local practice.

The ZK/U residency is a production space where artists, researchers and practitioners can meet and work on individual or collaborative projects and ideas. Since the ZK/U sees itself as a constantly evolving space, fellows are encouraged to bring their own inputs into the communal life, be it in terms of actions, creating collectives or simply contributing to the maintenance of the space.

With collaborative practices and peer-to-peer learning at its core, the residency is about exchanging with and learning from other artists and practitioners. It is a space for urban experimentation where fellows connect through common themes and interests (having ZK/U's conceptual framework as a meeting point) and engage in critical debate and ventures across transnational boundaries.

ZK/U

ZK/U offers event spaces with different capacities. On two levels and a roof top terrace, concerts and screenings, workshops and conferences and many other events happen regularly.

Kitchen

The kitchen is equipped with cutlery and dishes, basic appliances and a dishwasher. Residents share fridges and have private shelves for their food. The kitchen opens onto the terrace and hosts the weekly Monday Dinner.

Terrace

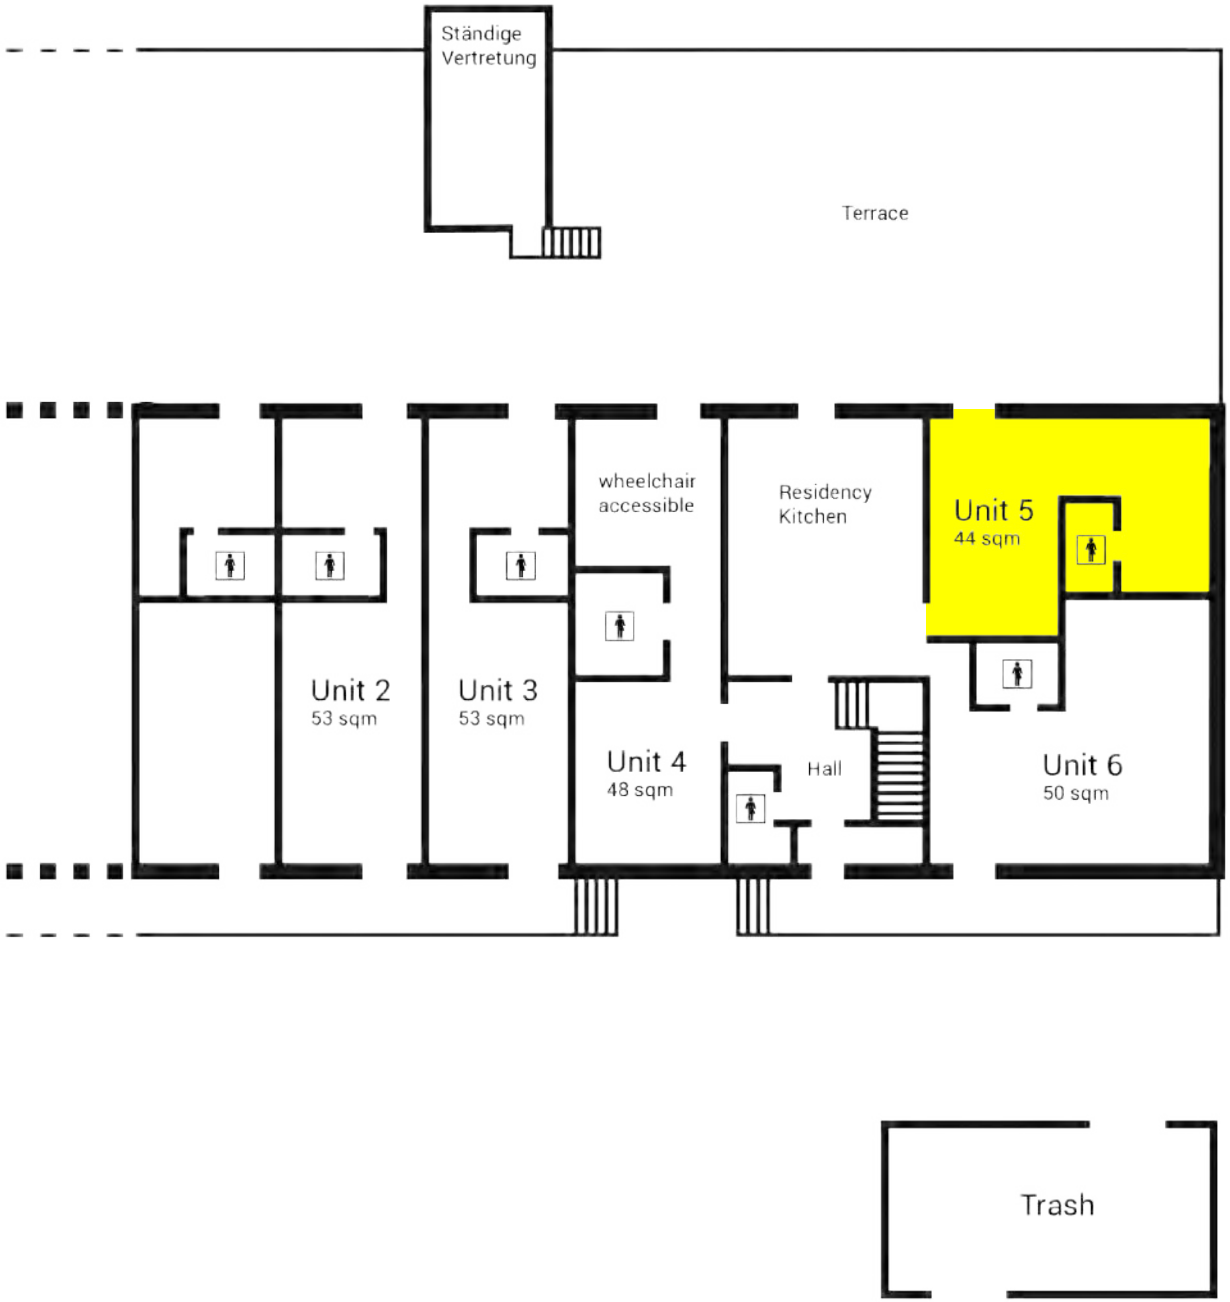

The shared terrace connects to the kitchen and overlooks the park and the Westhafen freight port. It‘s a space to hang out, work on messy projects or share a fun barbecue night together. Some studios have direct access to the terrace.
